UPDATE: We're resuming our Tobago service

We need to let you know that Virgin Atlantic has confirmed it will be resuming flights from London Gatwick Airport to the island of Tobago, with weekly departures between March and October 2015, and twice weekly departures between October 2015 and March 2016.

Virgin Atlantic will be operating the flights as an additional sector beyond their non-stop St Lucia services, meaning a short stop in St Lucia before the flight continues to Tobago.

Operating under flight numbers VS097 and VS098, the services will depart from Gatwick on Sunday mornings during the summer season, with the overnight return service leaving Tobago on Sunday evenings.

During the winter season, flights will depart from Gatwick on Tuesday and Saturday mornings, with flights from Tobago departing on Tuesday and Saturday evenings, landing into London the following morning.

The flights will operate on an A330-300 aircraft which is configured with 33 Upper Class, 48 Premium Economy and 185 Economy seats. It is one of the newest aircraft in the Virgin Atlantic fleet, featuring touch-screen Panasonic in-flight entertainment systems and mobile connectivity throughout the aircraft.

In total, Virgin Atlantic offers 23 peak return flights a week across its network to the Caribbean.

Tickets to Tobago will be on sale through the airline direct from today, Tuesday 11 November.
